

PROJECT DEVELOPMENT PROCESS

The task of building a street from initial planning through design and construction is a multi-year process that varies based on the category of the project. The diagram below illustrates the City of Ames' process, the four types of street projects (shown in yellow, green, purple, and light brown), and the primary stages in which Complete Streets decisions are made (labeled A through E).

* Federally-funded capital projects are often subjected to multiple rounds of environmental review and design revisions.
